Each Japanese prefecture has its own flag, yet many are not very well-known

Being designed similarly - a monochrome backdrop with logo-like design - the flags are of complementary nature

Each of Japan's regions enjoy a strong individual identity, promising regional specialties in products and landmarks
Identities are strengthened by recognizable logos and symbols

Many of these flags have an attractive design and meaningful symbolism - creating the perfect identity
A strong visual identity has great potential of even growing the region economy

The example of Amsterdam

The capital of the Netherlands its flag and symbol can be seen all throughout the city. It is heavily promoted and marketed, appearing on both infrastructure and products.

Takeaway - Japan and its many prefecture flags have much potential to market itself in all sorts of ways.

Prefecture Magnet Poster

This is just one example of spreading the awareness of the country's beautifully designed flags.

This poster is the ideal decoration for those who share a love of travelling and symbolism, maps, or vexillology.

Each prefecture is a separate magnet - so the poster can be used to track which region one has visited or played with as puzzle.

Magnets also sold individually
